Cowslip

Cowslips have rosettes of green, crinkly, tongue-like leaves low to the ground. Tube-like, egg-yolk yellow flowers are clustered together at the ends of tall, green stems.

Get Started!

- 1 From the car park of the Rose and Portcullis turn left up the hill; take the first left and continue past the old cottage hospital.
- 2 Go straight on through the gate onto the footpath crossing the field then across Harepits Lane noting the apple orchard on your right. Continue on the footpath diagonally across the field. Follow the stream course near the Millenium Wood.
- 3 Bear right on the path and head towards the road.
- 4 Spectacular views of Glastonbury Tor and the Levels can be seen from here. Turn left on the path towards Greenhill House.
- 5 Just before Greenhill House follow the footpath across a field passing through a further gate towards the Nature Reserve.
- 6 Enter the Somerset Wildlife Trust White Field Reserve in which you will find a species rich meadow, a small reedbed and an apple orchard. On exiting continue along the footpath towards Harepits Lane at which you turn left then right at the crossroads which leads you back to the car park of The Rose and Portcullis.

Feeling Better?

Bird's-foot-trefoil

Its yellow flowers look like little slippers and appear in small clusters. They are followed by seed pods that look distinctly like bird's feet or claws. A low-growing plant, its leaves have five leaflets and are downy.
